Digital Curation Centre

Tuesday 7 October 2014 14:00 (30 minutes)

The Digital Curation Centre (DCC) is the UK's national centre of expertise in digital preservation and curation, specialising in the management of data created by and used in research. DCC activities and services include: providing advice around best practice for digital preservation, data management and curation; helping universities to assess their existing institutional capability levels; providing generic and tailored training and guidance for different stakeholder groups; helping to develop and implement data-related policies; and support with data management planning. This presentation will provide an overview of the DCC's work with universities and other stakeholders, highlighting relevant activities and resources developed as part of our national role and via international partnerships and liaison.

Presenter: MARTIN, Donnelly (DCC)
