Finding the Right Funding Programme

Thursday 18 September 2025 17:06 (1 minute)

The German Research Foundation (DFG) is the central self-governing research funding organisation in Germany and the largest of its kind. Governed by the scientific community, the DFG supports outstanding research projects and promotes collaboration among researchers. It offers a wide array of funding opportunities—ranging from individual grants to large coordinated programmes. This poster provides an overview of individual funding schemes for researchers at various career stages, from the postdoctoral level to research group leaders and professorships.

Further information about other funding programmes, particularly coordinated initiatives, can be obtained during personal discussions.
